Summary of key findings for parents

This provision is outstanding

- Children settle exceptionally quickly into the pre-school. Staff visit children at home before they start, and this helps them to develop an attachment to their key person. Staff fully understand the emotional needs of young children and they are kind and reassuring.
- Partnerships with parents, carers and families are exemplary. Staff see parents' roles as pivotal to their children's learning and they heartily encourage them to engage in all aspects of the pre-school.
- Staff set exceedingly clear and consistent boundaries that help children to feel secure and safe. Children behave extremely well in the setting. They learn to listen, wait patiently and follow instructions.
- All children progress extremely well from their starting points. Staff are exceptionally swift to identify gaps in children's learning and to seek appropriate professional support. Staff are particularly skilled at targeting specific areas of children's development and helping to narrow any gaps quickly.
- Staff reflect continually on their practice and the effectiveness of their planning. They are constantly striving to make improvements to the pre-school. Staff frequently implement the suggestions of parents and children when planning for future changes.

Inspection findings

Effectiveness of the leadership and management is outstanding

Managers and staff share a deep passion and drive to achieve outstanding outcomes for children. Managers monitor the progress of groups of children meticulously and precisely. This helps them to understand if any areas of practice need to be adjusted to help all children reach their full potential. Teaching is of an exceptionally high standard and staff supervision is extremely effective. Managers have an excellent understanding that more focused monitoring will help to expand staff skills to an even greater degree, and boost their confidence further. Managers thoroughly monitor staff training to ensure they are kept up to date with any changes in legislation and procedures. Safeguarding is effective. Staff have a thorough understanding of their responsibilities to protect children, and know where to find up-to-date information should they need to raise a concern.

Quality of teaching, learning and assessment is outstanding

Staff have an excellent knowledge of how children learn and develop through play. Staff skilfully follow the children's lead as they play and extend their learning, such as adding resources and using careful questioning techniques. They build on children's interests to encourage their thinking and problem-solving skills. For example, children pretend a crate is a pirate ship and staff ask them to think what might make a good mast. Staff provide craft making materials so children can make flags and treasure maps. They supply strategically placed books, compasses and other artefacts to stimulate children's imagination further. Staff hide coins and bangles among natural resources and children gleefully celebrate the treasure they have found. Children's emerging communication and language skills are extended exceptionally well as staff teach them new words, such as telescope and binoculars to link with their theme.

Personal development, behaviour and welfare are outstanding

Children are curious and inquisitive. They love to explore and use their imagination. For example, children find twigs and branches pruned from a tree and make a cosy den and a campfire. Staff closely supervise children and teach them about risks and hazards. Children learn about lifecycles, growing and harvesting. They enjoy examining snails eggs and planting vegetables. Staff teach children about foods that are good for their health and they taste different fruits. They learn how to be independent and do things for themselves. For example, they tidy away their resources and wash sand from the toys. Children test their physical abilities when they tie ropes around tyres and pull them or roll them away. Children learn to take turns and share with their friends. They find out about people and places and learn to respect each other's cultures and traditions.

Outcomes for children are outstanding

Children are confident learners and make exceptional progress in readiness for school. For example, they develop excellent mathematical skills, such as by comparing spots on dice and correctly matching them to numerals. They search through books to find things out and recognise that words have a meaning. They build a construction from blocks and measure it with tapes, reading numbers and comparing sizes.
